1. The Yugoslav Ministry of Navigation has organized various schools and courses for the training of seamen. They are attended by all categories of trainees, from semi-skilled laborers to ship captains.
2. At present, over 650 young men and women are enrolled in the naval "Technicums", a new title given to specialized high schools, in Kotor, Dubrovnik, Bakar and Fiume, where skilled seamen and technicians are being trained. Each "Technicum" has a ship's machine section equipped with workshops for practical instruction. The workshops are well equipped with the necessary tools and instruments.
3. The General Directorate of the Merchant Marine has organized a large number of technical courses for naval mechanics and technicians. A course for captains and junior officers assigned to trans-oceanic routes is held at the naval "Technicum" in Fiume and at the Kotor school. Two different courses are given for radar operators. Radio telegraphists are trained in the radio school of the Fiume "Technicum".
